It Wasn't Ty Cobb's First
Time To Run Amuck, Oh, No, No!

Georgia Peach Has Lovely Record, Here Given, and Worship of Fans Seems to Have Gone to His Head a Bit—One Good Thing About It.

Tiffany water is circus lemonade compared to the way this glorious athlete goes to a boob's think puberty. No arrests, being home town. Went auto riding season of 1910 and forgot to come to ball park in time for game. Happened twice.

Quit the Tigers in 1910 because Davy Jones played left field. Gave out interview he would not participate until Jones was removed.

Wouldn't make trip to Chicago in autumn of 1910 because he could not hit on White Sox grounds. Had lead over LaJoie for batting honors and wanted to keep it.

Quit the Tigers in Chicago and went home because didn't like hotel room. Said passing trains made too much noise. This happened five days ago.

Jumped into stands at New York and beat up a spectator who is alleged to have made displeasing remarks.

Of course there are a lot of little things that don't count and besides there is no space. No doubt Ty has that so-called "artistic temperament," which makes the French artist break windows and the prima donna make faces at the pianist. Viva Ty Cobb as a ball player, but nix Ty on this rough stuff.

One good thing comes out of this Ty Cobb thing. Here it is: "Any person using profane or abusive language directed against either home or visiting players will be expelled from the grounds."

What had weather for the champs. Johnny Kilbane got it at Boston from Jimmie Walsh, who Moran came poorly against Charlie White, and Ad Wolgast had a lovely time with Ritchie. You never know nowadays what will happen—Las Vegas papers, please copy.

And here's another good thing: We don't have to do that again—thank heavens.

before in this column, the fan, not the player, some day will be investigated by national commissions. A foul mouthed fan is a nasty thing which shouldn't be tolerated in any park, big or small. Heavens knows ordinary baseball chatter is bad enough. But out and out profanity and vulgarity should be stopped now. The last, the utter absence of sportsmanship is appalling. The fan who balls out the player from the grandstand wouldn't differ face to face with the athlete.

The player, keen strung, should be given all the encouragement possible. Of course, the American fan will always root to a fare thee well, but let him howl, decently or not at all.

Fred J. Southard, an amateur aviator, tumbled 100 feet to his death at Kent, O., this week. He bought a machine from the Wright Bros. and like Darius Green, tried and fell. Of all things we can think of just now that an amateur shouldn't trifle with it's this flying business. It's the same old story of "who's to you?"
